Soap Silk Roses

Quick and Easy:

Gently melt your Farmhouse Glycerine Clear Soap

Add Fleur Perfume/Fragrance to the melted soap - as much as you like

Leave the soap to cool and thicken a little

Hold the silk rose upside down by the stem and dip into the melted soap

Let the melted soap drip back into the pot then dip again

Dip your rose three times or more

When the soap has stopped dripping place the rose down to set properly

With a soft brush dust the rose with mother of pearl glitter

More Soap Silk Roses

Above: Same method as before. But this time dipping your silk rose into Farmhouse White Venus soap then dusting with lustre sparkle when set.
Below: Same method as before. But this time I dipped a purple silk rose into clear soap and did not dust it afterwards

More Soap and Roses

Gently melt your Farmhouse Glycerine Purple Fleur soap. Pour a layer of soap into your mould and leave to set. Then pour a layer of Farmhouse White Venus soap over the set purple layer. The Venus soap must be hot enough to melt the first layer a little because otherwise the layers won't bind. Fill the mould to the top in this manner. Leave to set and then unmould. Dip silk roses in clear soap as seen above. Then stick the roses on the soap bars using clear melted soap

Cameo Soap with Rose

Gently melt your Farmhouse Soap, either the clear purple Farmhouse glycerine soap or the white Farmhouse Venus soap. Pour a thin layer of soap into your mould to cover the cameo rose at the bottom. When that has set continue to pour layers of soap, one at a time to fill the mould. Remember that each new layer has to be hot (not steaming) when you pour it otherwise it won't stick to the layer below. Unmould the soap when set. You can dust the rose with Mica to highlight it or not. Both options look lovely
